The Bulbs to Plant in the Fall

With just a little time and care you can have a brilliant array of lovely flowers next spring, by planting such bulbs as Tulips, Hyacinths, Narcissus, Crocus, Snowdrops, Scillas, Lillies, etc. These bulbs must be planted in the fall.

Start now by planting some of these bulbs. In the spring you will have a gorgeous display of blooms that will make your home surroundings more beautiful each year.

Anyone Can Grow Them. Success is sure, for within the bulb is the sure means of propagation, culture only being required to develop them. Cultural directions are sent with every order.

Fall Is an Ideal Time to Plant

In all sections of the United States, except the far north and New England, such Hardy Perennials, Roses, Shrubs, Berry Plants, etc., as are listed in this book may be set out in the autumn. They get well established before winter and are ready to start growth with the first sign of spring.

Winter Protection

Late in the fall after the first killing frost, hill up the soil around each plant to a height of a foot or so. It is advisable to bring in soil from another location for the hilling-up rather than to scrape it off the tops of the roots. Where the winters are severe or as an added protection, after the ground is well frozen, a covering of leaves, straw, hay, fine corn stalks, small evergreen boughs or any other porous material may be used to fill in the valleys made by the hilling-up process. The same material may be used as a protection for hardy perennials, but, of course, they should not be hilled up. Such a covering applied after the ground is frozen, will help to keep it frozen throughout the winter. This is highly desirable, as frequent Freezing and thawings may do much harm. Without a covering, plants are sometimes heaved out of the ground and rendered worthless. As soon as all danger of frost is past in the spring, this covering should be gradually removed. Keep some of the material handy to throw over the plants lightly, should a cold snap occur. The soil used to hill-up the Roses, Shrubs, etc., may be removed a little at a time. The branches that were covered will be plump and green, full of life, and ready to sprout out as soon as the first warm days appear.

Take Pride in Your Garden or Lawn

A garden is a source of beauty all may share and a fascinating pastime for every home owner or tenant.

Have you planned your vegetable garden so you will enjoy fresh, wholesome food for your table throughout the entire season? Have you utilized all your space?

Now is the time for planting your late summer and fall flowers.

A well-kept lawn adds the final touch of beauty to the home. To improve an old lawn by top-seeding or to make a new one, fall is an ideal time. The grass becomes firmly established before winter sets in and starts to grow again in early spring, often before it is possible to work the ground. Use good seed—use Maule's.

Maule’s Hardy Everblooming Roses

Among the most beautiful of all Roses being known by many as Hybrid Tea or Monthly Roses. They do not bloom all the time, but if kept pruned and cultivated, one crop of flowers succeeds another at brief intervals throughout the summer.

Planting Roses in the Fall

After planting the bushes hill up the soil around each plant to a height of a foot or so. Use soil from another location for thehilling-up rather than to scrape it off the tops of the roots. Where winters are severe, the entire plant may be covered with soil. Between the plants use a covering of leaves, straw, corn stalks, etc., applying same after the ground is frozen. The idea of so doing is to keep the ground frozen throughout the winter. The covering and soil used for hilling-up may be removed a little at a time in the spring.

Maule’s Hardy Flowering Shrub

The proper utilization of ornamental shrubs and trees adds mightily to the attractiveness of the home surroundings. Fall is an ideal time to set out shrubs. They begin their root growth early in the spring, becoming established before hot weather sets in. We begin digging after frost has ripened the wood, usually about the middle of October. They may be set out then until ground is frozen.

Maule’s Giant Pansies (Heartsease)

For early Spring blooming, sow seeds in August or early September in the open ground or cold frame. They are quite hardy, but we recommend giving them a slight protection with straw or coarse litter during the Winter. Pansies demand good soil, thriving best in a cool, moist but well drained position. Do not plant Pansies in the shade of a tree or building, as this causes straggly plants with very few blooms.

16F00 Maule’s Giant Phenomenal

The strain originated in France, consisting of the largest, choicest, and most “phenomenal” specimens that could be selected. Phenomenal Pansy exhibits those captivating wine red shades that are so rare among flowers.
